Successful Projects Announces Distributorship Agreement with Exclaim!

La Crosse, Wisconsin (Oct. 19, 2009) Successful Projects has signed a distributor agreement with Andover, Massachusetts-based Exclaim!, a Project Management Training and Consulting firm (<http://mysite.verizon.net/exclaim>). Exclaim! was founded in 1990 by Rich Maltzman, PMP, who has developed PMP®-exam preparation courseware, including practice exams, books, and audio programs and consults, develops, and delivers courseware for commercial and academic enterprises. Mr. Maltzman has an engineering background with a BSEE from the University of Massachusetts, an MSIE from Purdue University, a mini-MBA from Wharton and a Master's Certificate in international business management granted jointly from Indiana University's Kelley School of Business and INSEAD of France.

Mr. Maltzman received his Project Management Professional certification (PMP) in 2000 after earning the Stevens Institute's Master's Certificate in 1999. Exclaim!'s mission is to assist and inform organizations and individuals about Project Management, using the framework provided by the Project Management Institute yet based on the hands-on experience of running real projects, managing real project managers, and training of thousands of real people on real PM. Maltzman has presented papers on project management at conferences in The Netherlands, Mexico City and many US locations.

Kay Wais, Successful Projects founder and owner, is very pleased to have Exclaim! representing her company and products, saying “Rich has been a leader in the project management community with a special emphasis in the environmental arena and in increasing the reach of project management. He started and moderates a professional and popular blog called Scope Crêpe (<http://scopecrepe.blogspot.com>) and is a co-founder of a new environmental/sustainability consulting and training firm EarthPM (www.earthpm.com). EarthPM is at an important point in today's world – the intersection of Green and PM.”
